1. No flying was seen in the Stendal (N 53/Y 85) area and no aircraft were observed at the Borstel (N 53/Y 77) airfield between 2 and 9 January 1951. * All the barracks buildings at the field were occupied by an estimated 400 to 500 Soviet Army troops. Trucks [REDACTED] and command car [REDACTED] were seen at the field. **
2. A construction laborer employed at the field said that a small air force detail of about 30 to 40 men was quartered in the barracks buildings. ***
3. The Stendal-Borstel airfield was still unoccupied by aircraft on 9 January 1951. The hangars were closed and no radio installations were set up. There were no indications that flights were conducted. The landing field was serviceable. The fence along the Stendal-Borstel road was removed. Individual air force soldiers were seen on the road to the field and Soviet Army troops were quartered in the barracks buildings at the field.
